We evaluated the performance of climate models relative to observations for 64 Nordic and Arctic hydrological catchments:

- Model-observation agreement is similar for Runoff and Temperature, and distinctly higher than that for Precipitation or Evapotranspiration.
- Model projections for large-average Runoff are more or less similarly reliable as for large-scale average Temperature.